Pagan Gods' Home To Be A Replica Of Monte Carlo

PARIS, Aug. 20. (By International News Service.)—Mount Olympus, home of the Pagan gods. Is going to be turned into a modern pleasure resort, according to word just received from Athens. A company organized by foreign capital has been accorded the concession. In spite of the protests of savants and archaeologists, who declared that the project is sarriegious and predicted that Jupiter and the other gods would wreak a terrible vengeance on the defliers of their sanctuary, the Greek government accepted the plan.

A funtcular railway will take visitors to the summit of the mount and there they will find sumptuous hotels, a casisito where they can play roulette and other games of chance, clubs, skaling rinks, dance halls and private resi-

"absolutely no danger of a service in, in the words of leading financiers "absolutely no danger of a server erisis."

"Financing the cron movement during the next few months will not be as great a strain on the money market as hax been generally believed, said George M Reynolds, president of the Continental and Commercial National bank. Throughout the crop movement railroads will remain in a state of congestion. It is not likely any particularly heavy movements will take blace at any one time. As a result, credit requirements will be spread over the entire period.

Movement of new wheat to Chicago, which for several days after July 15 equaled only one-fourth of nocomic has been rapidly increasing. The general cituation was materially improved by resumption of trading in wheat for future delivers on the Chicago board of trade, which tends to stabilize prices and prevent losses through congestion and like causes." While thrinkage of Wall street stock market leans to the extent of several hundred million deliars in the last few months may help the situation, financing the grain movement to market, in the Central West is done from Chicago as a center Comparatively little local money is deviced to New York street market beans. After the crops have reached Chicago elevators and the movement states East, then there is a larger degree at New York financing. But the last para fater the original cop movement from farm to market.

Bath Is Last Word In Serbia; Lost Art Red Cross Declares VRAJNE, Serbia, Aug. 20. (By In time in Vrajne when the people in luded whatever the Serbian word for bath may be in their everyday vocabularies and not infrequently suited the ection to the word, but that was hunfreds of years ago. Today it is with difficulty that the envoys of the American Red Cross at Vrajne are teaching the people the practical meaning of the word.

And yet, of all the towns in Serbla, Vrajne is the one which should be most familiar with baths and bathing, for it is the home of the biggest and oldest Turkish bath establishment in the country. The ancient baths were built in the sixteenth century by the Turks themselves, who then ruled the country. They are housed in an ancient stone structure with a red tile roof.
The water, in the days when the baths were operating, flowed into hugilis above primitive underground furnaces from a spring whose crystal.

vals above primitive underground furnaces from a spring whose crystal stream now released, still hubbles through the vaulted cellars of the ancient establishment. The steam from the vata was led to the hot rooms above through channels cut in the solid rock walls of the building, for in the days when the Vrajne baths were constructed there was no such thing as an iron or lead pipe in all or Serbia.

Today the Vrajne baths are deserted. Bathing is a ritual of which the city's population has known nothing for generations. The youths of the town are learning the art from the Red Cross workers feeding and caring for the children of the poor, but the elders still look on the regular abiution of the body as a troublesome superfluity, and the ancient baths of Vrajne may crumble into ruins ere the subterranean steam vats bell and bubble again.
